ACKNOWLEDGMENT

W HILE the framework of this book is woven about earlier collections of materials on the family, much of the material is from new and previously untapped sources. I acknowledge gratefully the cooperation of many members of the family who assisted with material to a great or lesser degree in supplying information.

My especial thanks, however, are due Dr. H. C. Smith, MD, of Glendale, California, who has spent many hours in collaborative research among county records, many unindexed and disorderly, in order that a semblance of authenticity and continuity might be given the work.

NOTES ON FORM OF THE BOOK

HIS BOOK is built on a generation system, listing as nearly as possible the contemporary members of each generation of the whole family branch under discussion. Generally speaking, the first ancestor in this country is given a letter designating that particular branch of the family and the numeral "1". His sons are given the same letter, and a generation number "2", followed by a number indicating the sequence of their birth, where known (or assumed.) Thus the first number is a generation number, the second one (or more) numeral group a birth-sequence or family number. For example, a number E 6-41-345 indicates that the individual is the fifth son of E 5-41-34— or to put it another way, he is the fifth son of the fourth son, of the third son of the first son, of the fourth son of the original immigrant. This system varies in only two ways: after the seventh generation a true sequence would become too cumbersome so that for the eighth and succeeding generations, only the first two numbers after the generation number are true sequence numbers and so become a family indicator only— the remaining three numbers being arbitrarily selected serial numbers. (It is obvious in this system, that the individuals with this same family number are closely related.) The second variation: in case of intermarriage in the family, the female is assigned the number of her STOUT husband. Admittedly, there are obvious faults in this system, but it can be understood. A cursory examination will enable one to follow through the complete family line of any family. The female lines are usually indicated as decimal numbers, and disappear naturally after their families have been recorded in their proper place. Occasionally a female line is continued for more than one generation in a case of intermarriages back into the STOUT lines or where there are cadet lines, continuing the name.

The names of the children whose records are continued farther on in the book are generally printed in bold-face type.

PREFACE

GENEALOGY Has sometimes been defined as the art of looking up your ancestry to see if any of them are better than you are. To both the professional and amateur genealogist, it is an interesting avocation; a field filled with surprises, with disappointments, with crushed illusions and a continuing hope, culminating in a series of happy moments when new data are found and defeats when all historical trace of a family disappears.

I have spent as a hobby, some twenty-five years in the field of STOUT and allied genealogy. This book is the fourth of my published genealogies— and the second, not counting manuscripts, on the STOUTS.

To begin with, the name has three general derivations:

- (a) A genealogical name, as in Germany and the Low Countries, likely being derived from “staude”, meaning shrub, a symbol of which appears upon most of the arms.
- (b) A place name; e. g., 1308-9, an inquest is mentioned in Nottinghamshire records on one Stoutus de Stutville, an alien.
- (c) A descriptive or nick-name.

With the exception of the latter case, the origin of the family is probably in Germany, where they are still in some strength. Migrations through the lowlands to England seem probable and undoubtedly the Saxon migrations account for at least some of the “English” branch.

The name is variously spelled. In Germany it appears as Staud, Staut, Staude, Staudt and Stoudt. In Holland, Belgium and Denmark it appears similarly, with descriptive residence names such as Stoutjesdyk. In Flanders, the spelling was Stohte and in the provinces as Stut or Stute. In England, it is found in many forms, the commonest, Stout, but with variant forms of Stoot, Stoote, Stoott, Stought, Stoughte, Stoute, Stoutt, Stowt, Stowte and Stowtt. (Some of these are not necessarily of the family being also a variant of Stow and Stough.)

In general, in the United States, the name is found simply as Stout, regardless of origin; a few of the variants still exist, particularly in Pennsylvania, where the Germanic spellings hang on.

Though historical archives are full of mention of the family, expressions of relationships are very scant, and it is only by diligent search and careful cross-checking that they may be established in such a family.

I realize that the book is still incomplete; perhaps many members of the family are unmentioned because of lack of contacts and interest in genealogy among them. Many members probably lived out a lifetime without mention in the records. "The meek shall inherit the earth— but they seldom get their names in the papers." My trust is that this book may make it easier for someone else to carry on.

May the reader forgive me for such errors as have inadvertently crept into the book, especially those of biological impossibility. As my friend, Dr. Smith has reminded me from time to time:— "All things are possible with God, but they still have to be over four years old to bear children!" Old Nathan Stout covered most of his lack of information by a statement that "he moved westward and had a large family;" Stillwell frankly admitted that there was considerable doubt about some of his lines. This, of course, leaves me without excuse— but with no apology either. I have simply done the best I could with the information available. Only time, and that usually against the genealogist, may provide the correct connexions for some of the branches of the family presently unconnected.

STOUT AND ALLIED FAMILIES

Genealogy is a living monument to our ancestry and deserves a far, far better treatment than it has yet received in this country. Marble and granite may weather and decay but the printed memorial will undoubtedly perpetuate itself in the hearts of posterity. The Rev. John Baer Stoudt, of Pennsylvania, said: "Many people spend considerable sums in erecting valuable but silent tombstones to honor and perpetuate the memory of those who have passed away * * * On the other hand, a family history edited at far less individual expense will give a vivid and perpetual picture of all their kinsmen and guarantee that their memory will live now and in future days, not only in the hearts of their grandchildren and great-grandchildren but in the hearts of all who can feel proud to be of the same descent."

INTRODUCTION

ISTORY Tells us that the early Stouts were prominent Crusaders but early European history is a notorious liar. However, several of the arms of the family bear the "pale" of the Crusaders, merited or not.

Staudts are found historically in Germany as early as the fourteenth century. Similarly, the name is recorded in legal documents of England in the same period.†

Staudts were mentioned in both the Palatinate and Rothenburg country in Germany. In 1500, they were patricians in Worms and Speyer, both independent towns on the Rhine. We find them owning the seigniorial estate of Staudterhof, north of Kaiserslautern, also in the Palatinate. In 1549 Christoph Staudt, a member of the city council of Worms, died and, as was the custom, a placque was hung in his memory. It shows a family crest: the crest carries one of the devices of the city, a dragon or griffin.§ The dragon apparently degenerated into a fox, to-day the ensign of the family. In England, the crest is a talbot.

Unfortunately, the Palatinate was a battlefield of many armies and suffered accordingly. The family remained collected, however, until the beginning of the eighteenth century, when religious pressure following French occupation, forced those who had embraced the faith of the Reformation to seek healthier climes. This they did in adjacent Protestant provinces and in the new world. John Michael Staudt arrived in Philadelphia in 1773 as the first of a series of Germanic immigrants to that port.

STOUT AND ALLIED FAMILIES

Little is known of the background of the most prominent English ancestor, Richard Stout. He apparently disagreed with his father as a result of a youthful attachment and either joined or was impressed into the British navy where he served for seven years. Leaving his ship at (then) New Amsterdam, (probably by "jumping ship") he became a Netherlands subject by bearing arms and is listed as "a soldiery at ye fforte in Monmouth." This citizenship apparently stuck, as when the English took over New Amsterdam, he remained unmolested. If they had considered him still English, they would have hanged him out of hand as a deserter.

Whatever else our ancestors may have lacked, it was not courage. It took fortitude to face life in the New World and there are many historical recordings of disastrous endings to early members of the family.

"The pride and delight of Americans," said Harriet Martineau, * * *

"Is the quantity of land. If a man is disappointed in politics or love he goes and buys land. If he disgraces himself, he betakes himself to a lot in the west. If a citizen's neighbors rise above him in the town he betakes himself where he can be monarch of all he surveys."

Despite the hardships and perils, each family seems to have thrived almost without exception, comparatively few of the family dying in youth or infancy, for the times. So it is now that they are more numerous here than in any other country.

Dr. Smith, in the introduction to his history of his branch of the family: "Stouts in America" says: "The Stout Family like the descendants of all other colonial pioneers, are the ordinary run of the mill of materials. Governors, Generals, and other officers of the Army, Ministers, Attorneys, Physicians, Executives and Captains of Industry, Merchants, Artisans, Musicians, Farmers, Laborers, Ne'er-do-wells and some that remind us that someone has said that 'It is only the mule that has no pride of ancestry or hope of posterity;' so much so at times we look at them and wonder why they wear such short ears."

This may be my last attempt at a family history not from lack of interest but because such books always take long preparation and financing. I hope, however, that descendants of the family may be actuated to send me such additions and corrections to this volume as may come to their notice. Letters addressed to me at Dover, Ohio, will reach me. Please mark the envelope "Please forward."

*These guys were honest about it; there were more probably who really were in this category.

A large percentage of the “unknowns” probably were sons of the soil or something.

Blanks do not indicate a total absence of a profession but rather a fractional number too small to be properly evaluated as a definite percentage.

OCCUPATIONAL TRENDS

ORIGINALLY, Most of our immigrant ancestors were, by force of circumstances, farmers.

This was true even though they might have brought other skills to this country. In Pre-Revolutionary days, the homesteader had to be his own mechanic, storekeeper, schoolmaster and at times even his own doctor and lawyer.

An examination of the table shows that the family has followed the general trends in professions—with the passage of time—away from agriculture and into the skilled and semi-skilled occupations. This follows the general drift of the nation from a primarily agricultural society toward an industrialized economy. The family, unlike some others, has not been “typed” as to profession; their numbers and environment has prevented this altho certain branches of the family have followed marked lines of work in their own small spheres. It will be noted that the loss in farming percentages are gains for the labor and mercantile fields. Still, the percentage engaging in farming exceeds the national average.

This is not a complete study of the occupational trends of the family as the fields of endeavor have not been sufficiently particularized but general and primary professions only indicated. Farmers, as is noted previously, were usually pioneers, hunters, blacksmiths, millwrights, and “what have you,” but their primary occupation was agriculture. It should be noted also that a large portion of the males saw military and/or naval service, though comparatively few were professionals.

HUNTERDON COUNTY, NEW JERSEY

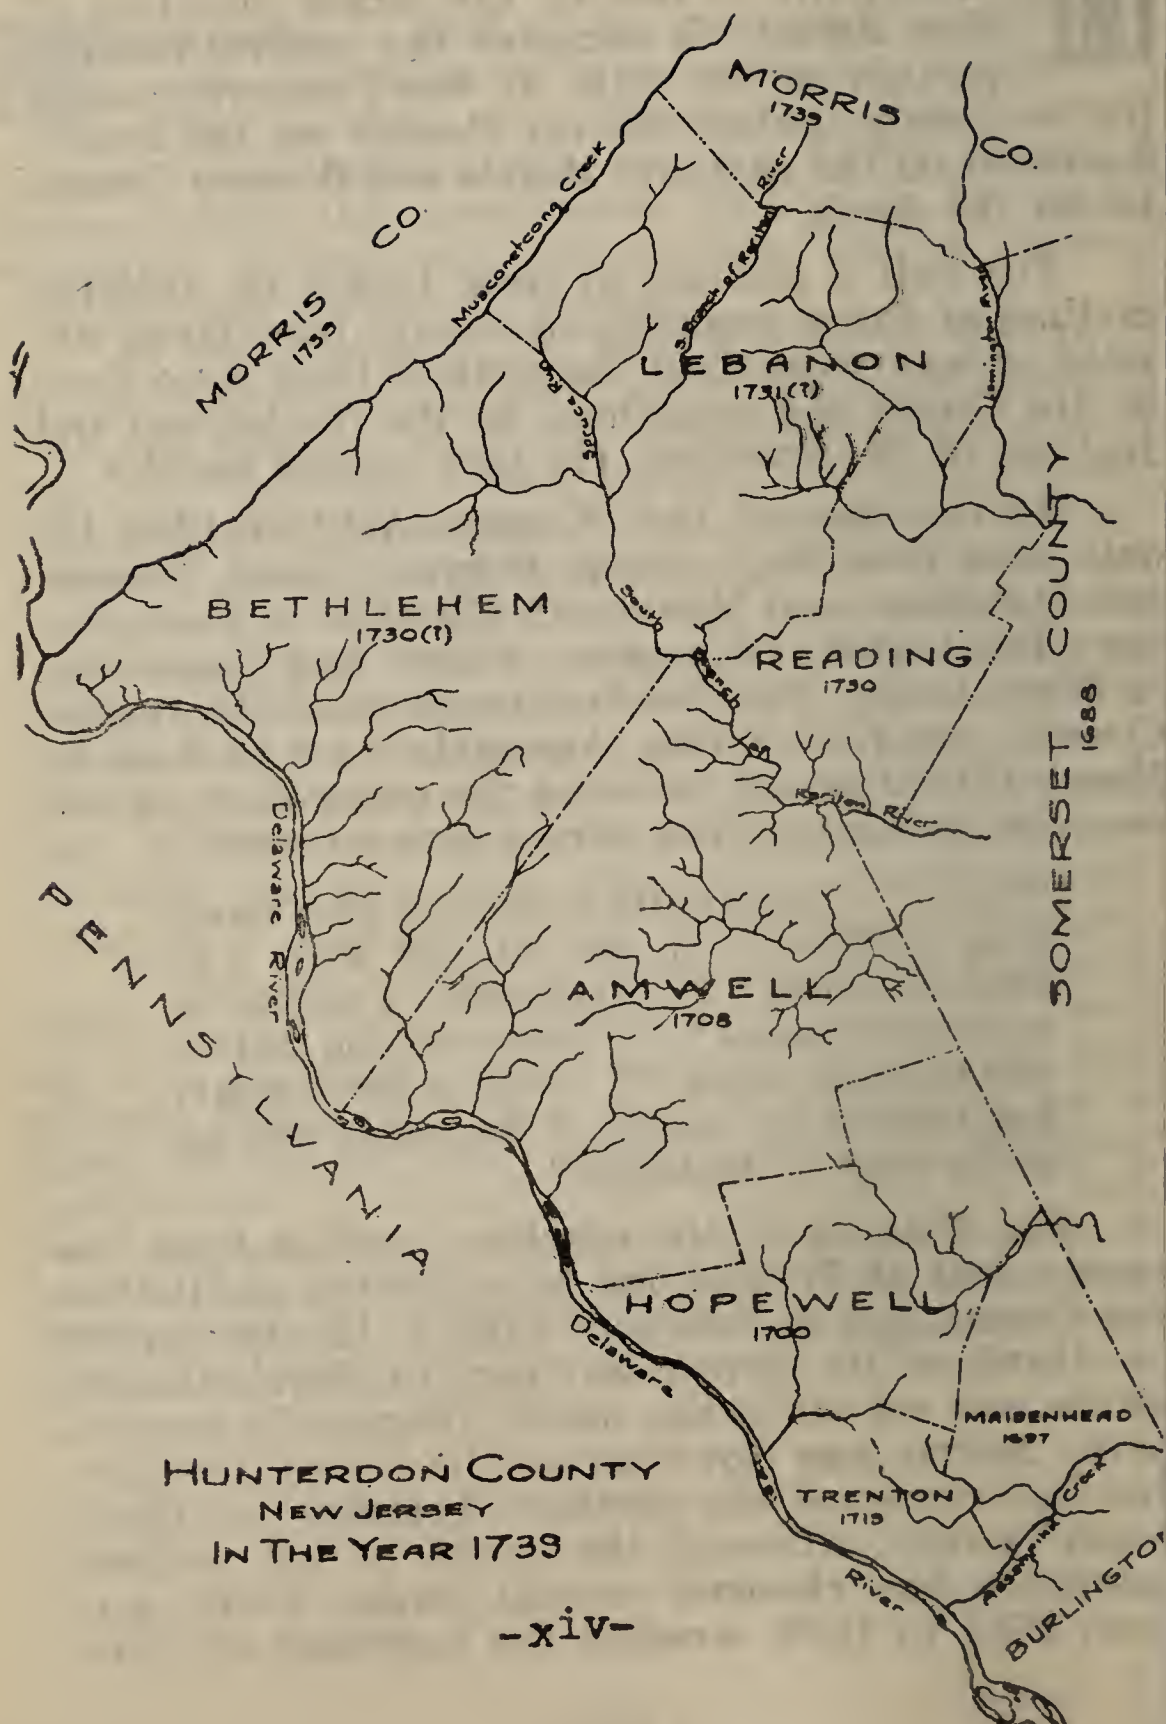

HUNTERDON Is one of the larger counties of New Jersey. It occupies the central-western portion of the state. It has Pennsylvania as its western neighbor, Mercer County on the south, Somerset on the east and Morris and Warren Counties on the north.

For half a century in New Jersey no uniform method of fixing township or county boundaries existed or was recognized. Sometimes they were fixed by the Crown and sometimes by the freeholders and justices of the Province. (In fact, no one cared.)

At the time of the "County Act" of 1709/10, only nine counties existed: Bergen, Essex, Somerset, Middlesex and Monmouth Counties in East Jersey; Burlington, Gloucester, Salem and Cape May in West Jersey. For the first mention of Hunterdon County, the New Jersey Assembly passed on 11 March 1713/4 an act "to erect the upper parts of the western division of New Jersey into a county."

"That * * * parts of the province of New Jersey lying northwards of, and situated above the brook or rivulet * * * Assumpink, be erected into a county named * * * Hunterdon and that the said brook or rivulet * * * shall be the boundary line between the county of Burlington and the said county of Hunterdon."

The distance of the northern portion from the county seat at Trenton led to a division of Hunterdon County and in February 1738/9, Hunterdon lost two-thirds of its former territory to Morris County which was set up to the north. (Strangely enough, Lewis Morris was Governor at the time.) The Raritan has remained the northern boundary of Hunterdon County, although the names of its northern neighbors has changed several times. Three acts, from 1785 to 1839, wrested the township of Hopewell from Hunterdon County and made it part of Mercer County.

Thus, in the text of this book, Hopewell which was the site of many Stout holdings is referred to as being in Hunterdon County which was actually true at the time, though today it lies within the boundaries of Mercer County.

As in most cases of division, Hunterdon was always the loser in the reorganization of counties. The only addition to the county was some islands in the Delaware River, (incidentally some of which were Stout holdings,) acquired by findings of a joint Pennsylvania-New Jersey Commission in 1786.

There is record of only one township set up by Royal Patent, that of Reading; 15 July 1730, by the then king, George II. How the remainder of all the original townships were set up is not known.

The charts on pages xiv and xv, show the Pre-Revolutionary evolution of the townships. In the 1840's additional townships were erected as a modern map will show, but they are of minor interest in following the early sites.

Many references occur to "Amwell" as a place of residence of early members of the family. The approximate site of the vilage, which no longer exists, was in the southeastern part of Amwell Township. This village was located on one of the many small streams in that vicinity and was until after the Revolution a mart and manufacturing center for that part of Hunterdon County for miles around. The whole site occupied less than four acres, as may be determined by the traces left in the ruins of the mills and dams. The by-products of one distillery alone maintained 500 head of cattle in the heyday of its prosperity. The village culminated its rise at the end of the eighteenth century and declined rapidly afterwards as more convenient centers of trade ap peared and siphoned off the business which had sustained it.

For a more complete exposition of Hunterdon County and Amwell, the interested reader is recommended to read "The History of Hunterdon County" and "Old Amwell," pamphlets prepared by Mr. H. E. Deats of Flemington, N. J., for the New Jersey Historical Society and probably still available.

NOTES ON LOCATIONS IN OTHER STATES

What has been pointed out in the foregoing article applies equally well to other counties and townships in other states. For example there were originally but three counties in Pennsylvania; residents of the western portion of that state, due to division of counties, could, without shifting their residence, have lived successively in five different counties.

In the book, in general, the correct location of residence was given geographically for that particular time without noting subsequent changes. This is important to the researcher who wishes further information, as the records he wants will probably be in the records of the county mentioned and not necessarily in the county where presently located.

THE STORY OF PENELOPE STOUT

WHILE There are a few families of other origin, most of the so-called English branch of the Stouts in America are descended from the union of Richard and Penelope (Van Princin) Stout.

Just how much of Penelope's history is fact and how much legend is difficult to determine at this chronological distance, but from the whole emerges a story of a determined and wholesome pioneer woman.

Born, presumably in Amsterdam, Holland, perhaps of dissenting English parents, which would account for her reported maiden name of Kent or Lent, she was early married to a Hollander by the name of Van Princin. The ship upon which this venturesome couple embarked for the New World was wrecked off Sandy Hook. Penelope and her spouse struggled ashore but were promptly set upon by unfriendly Indians, the husband slain and Penelope scalped, her left arm so severely injured that she had little use of it and her abdomen laid open so that it was necessary for her to use her hand to retain her intestines. Left for dead, she revived and sought refuge in a hollow tree for some days at the end of which, reasoning that it would be better to be completely dead than suffering, she revealed herself to another Indian hunting-party. The chief of the party, figured that she might be ransomed and had her carried to his village near what was later Middletown, Monmouth co., N. J. There her wounds were sewn with fishbone needles and vegetable fibre; despite this heroic treatment, she recovered and was ransomed by the people of New Amsterdam.

In "Marriages before 1699," the marriage is recorded as between "Richard Stout and Penelope Kent (or Lent), widow of Van Printzen 1634/5." That this date is in error biologically is evident on an examination of the other data available. Reasonably from the known vital statistics, Penelope was not born until 1622 and a second marriage was not likely at fourteen. I have seen in the Mitchell collection what purported to be a copy of a marriage entry at New Amsterdam, with the date 1644/5, which is more reasonable, though the authenticity may be questionable. It would seem reasonable that she was married for this second time at the age of 22. Richard Stout, having served seven years in the British Navy, was approximately 30. In 1690, Richard was relieved of paying certain taxes "because of his advanced age," although he lived until 1705, per his will.

The ecomiums passed upon Penelope by many historians indicate that she was rather more than a mediocre woman. She is credited in large part with the idea of the settlement of East Jersey, persuading her husband along with several others to bargain with the Indians, the chief who rescued her among them, for that tract in Monmouth county in which they settled.

Like many another woman, in a gossipy moment, she accused one neighbor of milking another's cows, but, taken to task, promptly confessed her error. Also, there was her feminine pride in her "operation." It is reported that she said to a grandson: "Johnny, put your hand in the pocket of my garment and feel the scars of my wounds; then you will know that it is true and you can tell your grand-children that it is true and they can tell their grand-children that it is true." (Referring, of course, to the story of her disembowelment by the Indians.)

This venerable ancestress died in 1732 at the ripe old age of 110 years! She had lived well into another century and had welcomed some 502 descendants into the world.

Excluding the possible accumulation of fictional exaggerations of time and repetition, she was still a remarkable woman!

THE WILL OF RICHARD STOUT

NOW ALL MEN by these presents that I, Richard Stout of Middletown, in the county of Monmouth, in East Jersey, being of Sound Mind and disposing memory, do make and ordain this to be my last will and testament which is as followeth:

I will that all my just debts be paid; I give and devise unto my loving wife, during her natural life, all my orchard and that part or rooms of the house she now lives in, with the cellar, and all the land I now possess. I give and bequeath unto my loving wife, all my horse kind, excepting one mare and colt. My son Benjamin is to have for keeping my cattle last year.

I give unto my sons John, Richard, James, Johnathan, David and Benjamin, one shilling each of them.

I give unto my daughters, Mary, Alice and Sarah, each of them one shilling.

I give to my daughter-in-law Mary Stout and her son John one shilling each of them.

I give and bequeath unto my kinswoman Mary Stout, the daughter of formerly Peter Stout, one cow, to be paid within six days after my wife's death.

All the remainder of my personal estate whatsoever, I give and bequeath unto my loving wife, and to this, my last will and testament, I make my son John and my son Johnathan my executors to.

For this my will performed, in witness hereof I have hereunto put my hand and seal, June the ninth day, in the year one thousand seven hundred and three.
